Last year a group of European research funders calling themselves cOAlition S la unched a radical new open-access initiative dubbed Plan S.

However, OA advocates managed to persuade governments, funders and institutions that their colleagues should be compelled to embrace open access.

OA initiatives have also often had unintended consequences and the movement has been beset with disagreement, divisiveness, and confusion.

The stated goal is to ensure that from 2020, "scientific publications that result from research funded by public grants must be published in compliant open access journals or platforms.

This often poses significant challenges for, for instance, researchers in non-S TEM disciplines.

At the end of last year I was contacted by Jamila Jaber, Library Director at the

Islamic University of Lebanon (IUL), who asked me if I would consider doing an interview "with two researchers, one from a "developed country" and one from a "developing country" (from the Arab world for example).
